

Hachito's Big Adventure

An Illustrated Storybook

Hachito loved the wide green park. With a bone in his mouth, he raced so fast that the trees and grass seemed to cheer for him.

After running and playing, Hachito curled up in his cozy bed. His eyes grew heavy, and soon he drifted into dreams of adventure.

When he woke, Hachito rolled a ball across the floor, chasing it with happy leaps. He wondered if the world outside held even greater games.

Suddenly, a cat appeared at the edge of the yard. Hachito barked with all his might, his tail wagging, his heart brave.

He slipped into his silly brown jacket with tiny wings. Whenever Hachito wore it, he felt like he could do anything-even fly.

A rocket appeared, gleaming and ready. With a joyful bark, Hachito hopped aboard.

The engines roared, and together they soared into the night sky.

At last, he reached the shining moon. Hachito looked down at the world below, wagging his tail at the thought that adventures can take us farther than we ever dreamed.
